I have been farming for about thirty years and during that space of food.

In the past hundred years vast new areas of fertile land have been opened to cultivation, but famine still exists, partly through partly through a partly through lack of transportation.

While this problem may not seriously affect America for several generations, at the present rate of increase in population it will only be a question of time until the food situation will be a grave one for the entire world, unless improved chemical means for sustaining life can be practically developed.
